In a patriotic reverie last week, I found myself ruminating on one of my favorite hymns, I Vow to Thee, My Country. Setting aside the irony that on the Glorious There Is Another Country Lyrics: You watch and wince and then you yearn / "Will people in London never learn?" / The grace of Harrow and Eton skies / Has yet to be beaten in your eyes / Give me ...Julian Mitchell's 1981 play Another Country, and the 1984 film of the same name, derive their titles from the words of the second stanza of "I Vow to Thee, My Country". [19] The hymn was played at United States Senator John McCain 's funeral service at the Washington National Cathedral on Sep 1, 2018.Excerpt: It is both natural and right that human beings love the country that has nurtured them. God binds our hearts to particular places and people, and there are few things sadder than one who is simply a citizen of the world, feeling no particular loyalties. It is also natural and right that citizens should,... - And Theres Another Country
